

Join the APD in Vancouver for the
WORLDWIDE DERMATOLOGY RESIDENCY TRAINING PROGRAMS SYMPOSIUM
Monday, June 8th, 2015
0800 - 1200
Vancouver Convention Center
West 223-224

The Association of Professors of Dermatology (APD) is a professional group whose members are professors of dermatology (Chairs, Chiefs, Directors of Residency Programs, and other academicians) working in university dermatology programs of the USA, Canada and Puerto Rico. The APD mission falls in three categories, medical education (medical students, residents and fellows), research and patient care. In reality, the APD members are academic dermatologists that steer the future of the specialty from their university centers of work. The forum where the advances in medical education, research and patients care trends are presented and discuss is the APD Annual Meeting. The APD is an organization that is self-dependent and supported by their membership, thus maintaining their noble academic activities free of the influence of external economic corporations and powers.

This Symposium will be dedicated to the different training modalities of dermatology residents around the world. We wish to learn how dermatologists are trained and become recognized as specialists. The selection of residents, duration of the training, financial support of residents, areas of training, specialty exams (boards), accreditation of residency programs, government requirements to be recognized as specialist, maintenance of certification. Join us for this APD meeting, as we establish the connections of the different dermatology training programs of the world, that we are certain will benefit our specialty.
